HABITS OF THE SEA EAGLE. This species of the engle is much more common on the west coast of Sutherland than the golden eagle. Scarcely a day passes in winter but one or more are to be seen in front of this house (Loch Inver Inn.) soaring in the air, looking out for dead fish which may be cast on the sea beach by the roaring tid. This seems to be their principal food at this season, with occasionally a braxy sheep for a change. In spring they secure a plentiful supply of tender flish by devouring young lambs; in summer they feast on fawns, young hares, and the young of the different sea birds, such as gull, gullamots, puffins, &c., and in the autumn of the year they take to the shallow fords of the different rivers in search of salmon, which they secure in very shallow water, spaw-

Stonehead, Capewrath, Farouthept, Whitenhead, and Dunnethead, are sure to have one or more pairs breeding in their rocks every season. My friend, John ing. Here you may see one or more seated on a rock, or a large stone, patiently awaiting his prey Wooley, Esq., of Derbyshire, an indefatigable naturalist and thorough gentleman, visited the north until an opportunity offers, when he will dart on last April in search of rare bird's eggs. BEATTIE'S FORB. Lincoln Co. N. C.) October 25, 1850. WORK will be published by the undersigned this A Spring, entitled as above, giving an accurate account of each County in our State, in Alphabetical order, the derivation of its name, date of formation, its Colonial and Revolutionary History, a Biography of its distinguished citizens, an accurate list of its representation in each branch of the General Assembly, its Towns, Rivers, Population, Resources, Products, and Topography The undersigned has for many years been collecting and condensing the material for this work. The archives of our own State have been carefully examined, and copious extracts made from its records. He has procured from the offices of the Board of Trade and Plantations in London many valuable documents. Rare and valuable tured in Beautiful Mahogany and Rosewood cases, of works have been purchased from abroad, touching the early history of our State, and each County, which have never seen the light. He has been kindly aided by gentlemen in different sections by copies of original docu-ments, and faithful traditional statements, highly important and interesting.

He does not aspire to the position of the Historian but hopes from records and statistical facts to afford materials to other and abler hands for this pleasing and less laborious duty. This work, it is hoped, will be useful as a book of reference to the statesman and scholar, and man of business or leisure. Occasional extracts have State, over the signature of "Tacitus."

The History of North Carolina is yet to be written The remark which one of the ablest Historians of the age, (Bancroft,) has been compelled to make, that "so carelessly has the History of North Carolina been written that the name, merits and end of the first Governor is not known," is a reflection upon us. An examination of the early history of the Counties of North Caro lina shows a record of the purest patriotism and indomitable courage. This record is now covered by the dust of age, and unknown by neglect. It is a debt which the present generation owes to the past as well as the future to preserve these memorials; for it often occurs in the history of our race, that facts known to one generation are controverted by the next, and at a succeeding period are considered as doubtful legends, unworthy of historical faith. Our Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence, in May 1775, had almost been an illustration of this truth.

"These are deeds which should not pass away, And names that must not wither; though the earth Forgets her empires with a just decay,

The enslavers and the enslaved, their death and birth. It will contain about 500 pages, and be furnished at one dollar a copy. Subscriptions will be received and the book furnished at different points of the JNO. H. WHEELER. P. S. Editors of the different Presses in the State are
